WOODROW WILSON

It was our pleasure to hear President Woodrow Wilson on Saturday night, the 10th, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Wilson spoke from his porch at his home in Washington, D. C. His voice and articulation, while understandable, was that of a man 75 or 80 years of a change of venue was given Judge Sharp on Tuesday of this week when he determined to send the cases from Greenbrier county, not, as he stated, that a fair trial could not be had in Greenbrier, but owing to conditions it was wise to send them from the county. The attorneys in the cases would not attempt to agree on a county to which they were to be sent but each side submitted a list of counties and Judge Sharp selected Fayette county and accordingly the cases have been removed to that county and are set for the first day of the January term of the circuit court there.

This is the fourth move of these cases. They were first moved from L Logan to Jefferson county, from Jefferson to Morgan, and from Morthe regular order in these cases, defendants took advantage of every pretext against them for a change of venue and filed numerous affidavits together with several newspaper clippings which they claimed were of a nature to create prejudice against them. This has been the rule ever since these cases started and it seems to be the practice. It has a tendency to drag the cases through the courts and wear them out.

Knowing this to be true, the In- dependent warned the people of Greenbrier county, immediately Judge Woods sent the cases to the county, to keep hands off the cases, and for this reason persistently refused to publish anything which would lay a foundation for a move of this kind in order that these cases might be terminated in this county in an orderly process of trial and justice meted out to those charged with the crime. No one doubts, in the county that a Greenbrier jury could have been secured which would have rendered a fair and impartial trial, but a foundation was laid for a pretext for a change and it was taken advantage of and Judge Sharp, under all the circumstances of the situation sent them out of the county. All things considered, perhaps every citizen of the county rejoices that they have gone from us.

The "hangers on" in these cases for any purpose and we would not attempt to express in these columns the manner and ways of this swearing, except to say that to all honest people, to say the least, it is very degrading and of a very low order.

This applies to a greater or less degree to every phase of the case. It is indeed unfortunate that such things and such methods are drawn into a court of justice. They are to be condemned.

It is unfortunate that any citizen of the county became entangled in these cases in any way. It is also unfortunate that even a pretext was given the defendants for an excuse for a removal of the cases.

The Independent has been criticized for not publishing any of the dirt and rottenness of these trials, but it can now congratulate itself
